Sewing Machines and the Infringement of patents.—The patents of I. M. Singer & Co., 183 Sroadway.

Sewing Machines and the Infringement of patents.—The patents of I. M. Singer & Co. upon sewing machine have been triumphantly surained by trials in the United States courts. First, in a sait against the excelsion fewing Machine, we obtained the variet was recovered in New York; and secondly, in the United States Curout Court, held at Treuten. N. J., on the Sist of March 1856, after a contested trial of a suffagainst the Dorona Sewing Machine, we obtained a clear verticit for the intriprement of three distinct patents. These suffs confirm the validity of our patents, and especially set te the great question of our exclusive right to the indiscensible device in a sewing machine of a yielding pressure to held the cloth to the surface of the machine. We have similar suits now pending in several Circuit Courts of the United Moises against the Grover & Rater machines, and the Wiseler & Wilson machines, each of which clearly infrings three patents sweed by us a trial in the city of New York of some of these saits is expected to take place the present month, four claims are just; they have already been repeated y sustanced by courts and juries, and we hereby caution the public set to purchase or me any of the infringing machines, if they desire to escape litigation and trouble.
